

Welcome!

Written by Andrew Sloan
Thursday, 04 September 2014 00:00

Hello and welcome to My Two Cent$ Blog. This blog will serve as another way for us to share information that is current and relevant within the world of personal finance. Our hope is that you will use this as an objective source of information to help you make better financial decisions without the worry of someone trying to sell you a product.

Since our work requires a lot of research and continuing education, a secondary role of this blog will be to share with you links to articles and commentaries that we find to be particularly well-written and may be relevant to your financial life. We strongly believe that the best investment one can make is in life-long learning, so we hope to provide some tips and refer you to other sources that will empower you to make better decisions to improve the quality of your life.

Please feel free to leave a comment or ask a question which we may use as a future blog topic.